REPORT OF NOANETT GARDEN CLUB

By Mrs. Edward W. Grew, President, Noanett Garden Club

In the autumn of 1932 certain members of the Noanette Garden Club were interested in finding a place where they could start a Wild Flower Sanctuary. So when Judge Walcott and the Directors of the Massachusetts Audubon Society kindly gave us permission to use the Bird Sanctuary at Sharon for this purpose we were most grateful. Nothing could be more perfect for our purposes than Moose Hill, not only because it offers a great variety of locations—pond, brook, deep woods and open meadow—which should suit plants of various needs, but because it is protected by guardians who live on the grounds.

Professor Stephen Hamblin made two visits to Moose Hill and gave us valuable advice about what to plant and where. He advised us to make a collection, as complete as possible, of New England trees, shrubs and wild flowers. Miss Eloise Butler, a botanist, who has created and maintained a Bird and Wild Flower Sanctuary in a city park in Minneapolis, was also consulted. She felt Moose Hill was ideal for our purpose.

At the Annual Meeting of the Noanett Garden Club in November $25 was appropriated to start the work. And in January it was voted that $200 be used for the cutting of the dead chestnuts, the work to be done by unemployed men. A little of the money was used to destroy poison ivy.

During the summer many expeditions have been made to Moose Hill. A cold frame has been put up where wild flowers can be started. Seed of Canadian columbine and Canada lily have already been planted.

A list of wild flowers already at Moose Hill has been started; this is kept in a card catalogue with the botanical names carefully looked up in Britton and Brown's botany, and each wild flower and shrub brought to the Sanctuary is added. A log is also kept of all events, money appropriated, dates of planting, etc.

Collecting expeditions have been made during the summer, and we have brought to Moose Hill specimens of the rare sabbatia, tall blue lobelia, meadow-beauty, Turk's-cap lily, calopogon orchid, monkey-flower, climbing fern, Massachusetts fern, loosestrife (Decodon) and Canada anemone. We were delighted to find a quantity of cardinal-flower growing along the brook and some yellow gerardia.

On Robin Hood Trail,[1] as you pass the seat and climb the wooden steps, seemed a perfect place for planting mountain laurel and flowering dogwood. Twenty-five Mountain laurel have been set out, and forty flowering dogwood are soon to be planted in that region. These are fine plants, though small, bought of Mr. Vandevoet in Taunton, who for years was at the Arnold Arboretum.

A little valley at the right, as you start to climb the steps, leads almost to the pond. This, we think, with a little clearing, would make an ideal place for planting. On the sloping sides it would be possible to make collections of native viburnums and cornels, with some Rhododendron maximum. Also Hermit Thrush Grove, under the pines, would be a fitting place to plant Azalea arborescens.

On all our many visits to Moose Hill during the summer we have had unfailing interest, courtesy and coöperation from Mr. and Mrs. Taylor and Mr. Cushing. We are trying to do the work thoroughly and well and we hope in years to come children will go to Moose Hill and study the wild flowers as well as the birds. They certainly belong together.

October 5, 1933.

[1]This part of the trail has since been named Noanett Trail in appreciation of the planting done by the Club.—The Editors.

NOTES FROM MOOSE HILL BIRD SANCTUARY

Species Seen at the Sanctuary October 6, 1933, and for the Same Date Last Year

By WILLIAM A. TAYLOR, Superintendent

As yet the juncoes, white-throated sparrows and goldfinches have been far less numerous than last year. The same is true with all the warblers save the black-poll, which from September 25th, to October 5th were very common, and the Connecticut.

	1933	1932
Sparrow Hawk	0	1
Bob-white	16	1
Mourning Dove	8	6
Flicker	2	12
Hairy Woodpecker	2	1
Downy Woodpecker	4	5
Phœbe	2	0
Chickadee	40	20
Catbird	3	8
Robin	6	6
Hermit Thrush	1	0
Black-poll Warbler	5	0
Purple Finch	20	25
Goldfinch	3	20
Towhee	6	4
Chipping Sparrow	8	10
Junco	0	15
White-throated Sparrow	4	20
Song Sparrow	2	7

Between September 15th and October 1st I saw from 10 to 15 Connecticut warblers about the grounds, which is my first record of the species at the Sanctuary. A lady brought me one from Foxboro that the cat had caught and she said there were several in that section.

Bob-whites came in a bevy for the first time October 2d. There were 16 (possible 17), in the company, and most of them were small birds, evidently this year's brood. Older and larger birds still come in lots of two to three or four.

Purple finches were very common during late summer and until the past week, many of them left. With the exception of the chickadees they are still our most common species.

Late in September several red-breasted nuthatches were about for a few days but none have been seen recently. White-breasted also rare.

Our number of species listed for the year is 101 at this time.

CONNECTICUT SLOWLY LOSING RUFFED GROUSE

From the Report of the State Fish and Game Commission

"All signs point to a slow but certain decrease of ruffed grouse," the report states. "This decrease is unquestionably due to inroads of disease thought to be akin to tularemia, because of the frequent presence of numerous ticks on the birds behind the 'ears.' Moreover, there seems to be a seven-year cycle of scarcity and comparative plenty which just about parallels the scarcity and plentitude of rabbits, thus indicating a relation between the two."
